INTERVALS OF IDLENESS

FIRM CLOSE AFTER A DULL DAY.

New York, Dec. 23 .- There was little in today's stock market to call for comment. The listless and neglect of the trading amounted to absolute idleness for long intervals. The attendance was meagre from the first and many members left the floor during the session on account of the hopeless-ness of any awakening of interests. Even the usual evenening up of con-tracts over a long holiday interval seemed to have been largely attended to during yesterday's session. Aside from the profound duliness the principal feature of the market was its strong undertone. There was no yielding tendency at any time and the slow largely greater than the slow largely attended to during yesterday's session. Aside from the profound duliness the principal greater than the slow largely attended to during yesterday's session. Aside from the profound duliness the principal greater than the slow largely g bardening process established a num-ber of fair advances. Such contracts as remained to be closed up were evi-dently on the short side and the rising tendency was generally attributed to covering of these. News was of little importance and its influence was no discernible in the movement. The usua forecasts of the week's currency movement with the interior indicated sufficient receipts to offset the gold ex-Forts and sub-treasury requirement and establish a cash gain of abou

The changes in the loan item at thi time are problematical, but there ha been no sign of any stock market liqui-dation as that which was caused las week's large loan contraction. The state of the money market effectually quiets all interest in the showing of bank statements at this time. Mone is difficult to place on call and the lenders on time are growing more an more lenient regarding collateral Loans for six months are made on al industrial collateral at about the same rates as on the usual mixed collateral. The outward movement of gold equally fails to arouse interest in view of this condition of the mone market. The amount to be disburse on Jan. 1 in dividends and interes is estimated to be larger than ever be fore on that date. The week's export of corn show the first symptom of act ive revival in that trade, the total have ing risen to 1,862,893 bushels, compare with 453,713 last week. the day's dealings falling to a lower total than at any time since midsummer. Prices were inclined to gravitate to a lower level with the inanition the trading but small advances so that the change from last week's level is not significant. Part of the dullness is attributable to the natural disinclination holiday owing to the danger of sudden developments while closed exchanges leave no medium for operating. The absorption of members in holiday affairs and the concentration of interest and resources in annual settlements also have the natural effect of curtailmg operations in the stock market

But account must also be tak-en of the influence of the short and violent reaction to which prices were resulting speculative losses suffered by those heavily committed at the high range of prices. It is evident that the shock to confidence and the discour-agement caused by the unfavorable shares in these losses are bearing fruit in the abstention of activity of a large element which helped to make up the operating in the market, attributable to the same causes. Dealings are largely in professional hands and the dealers are more within the class of board room professionals who operate for small and quick returns within the limits of the board room itself. dealers in securities must be attributed, therefore, to the problem of the reliability of present market prices as an index of actual values. This state of doubt is easily referrable to the instability which was demonstrated for the high range to which prices were carried by the excessive speculation. The consequence is that with every evidence of expanding business and in seeming prosperity and with money cheap and abundant, it is found difficult to induce buying of securities at any considerable advance im prices, especially if that advance be made rapidly and with any appearance of manipulation. An influence of restraint rapidly and with any appearance of manipulation. An influence of restraint on speculation must also be allowed to the large attention given to the policy of the administration toward the question of legislation for the regulation and control of railroads and individual corporations doing an interstate business. The sharpest break of the week in prices—was coincident with the appearance of the report of the commissioner of corporations.

Holiday trade and retail business generally hold the center of the stage, wholesale business and speculation in stocks and staples quieting down. In some lines of industry, too, seasonable influences make for quiet, but a marked exception is noted in iron and steel, which display activity and strength and still further advances on crude and finished products. Railway earnings (gross) are up to the best of the year, and exceed all previous periods at this time. Yet returns indicate present profitable operation about making up for lessened earnings earlier in the year. Clearings have slumped off from preceding week's enormous totals, but still largely exceed returns of a year ago. A preliminary survey indicates close to, if not in excess of, record proportions in holiday business, except in some portions of the south and the Pacific coast; good collections, except at a few southern and western points; easy money in all directions, a good volume of spring business already booked, and the general feeling of conservative optimism. Among the metals tin apd copper alone show weakness. Leather is firm, despite weaker hides, due to poor quality of offerings. Lumber is steady and a large consumption is looked for next year.

The textifies show more variance in price, due mainly to the absence of speculation and large receints, despite the holding back movement at the south. Wool is strong; supplies are limited; one-third of next year's clip is sold in advance, and the high cost of material makes for higher finished products.

Dun's Report.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade tomorrow will say:

Demand for holiday goods has exceeded expectations, but trade in staple merchandise is seasonably quiet. Business conditions are satisfactory, manufacturing plants producing freely, except where insufficient water supply restricts operations, and a large volume of option trading was recorded for the week at the leading community exchanges, Dispatches from the leading cities are encouraging.
